उत्तरी भारत में विज्ञान को लोकप्रिय बनाने के महत्वाकांक्षी लक्ष्य के साथ, देश की राजधानी में एक विज्ञान केन्द्र की स्थापना का प्रस्ताव अस्सी के दशक के साथ आरम्भ हुआ।

The proposal for setting up a Science Centre in the nation's capital was started in the early eighties with an ambitious goal of popularising science in the northern India.

The Centre started its humble beginning in 1980 in a small shed near a municipal swimming pool complex in Nehru Park at Chanakyapuri. A site office was provided by New Delhi Municipal Committee (NDMC) to begin work on an iconic Science Centre scheduled to come up in the nation's capital. Finally, 15.6 acres of land was allotted at Khyberpass Institutional area, Timarpur by Land & Development Office of Ministry of Urban Development in the year 1984.

The first Science Park of the city titled 'Vigyan Udyan' with open-air park exhibits and moderate office building were setup at Timarpur during the year 1987-88. The park was upgraded during 1997-98 for visitors to explore the concepts of science through fun and play. The land of Science Park was finally handed over to Delhi Metro Rail Corporation (DMRC) in 2002.
